ABSTRACT

Data on geographic origins of students in Kentucky's public and independent colleges and universities are reported. All higher education institutions, including two-year colleges, four-year colleges, and universities, are included. Tables present information on total and first-time freshman enrollment by county and state of student origin for each institution type and for first-professional enrollments by county and state of origin for state-supported universities. Additional tables contain total enrollment as a percentage of population and first-time freshmen as a percentage of high school graduates by county of origin for both state-supported and independent institutions. Two Kentucky counties were found to provide a major proportion of higher education enrollments, accounting for 31% of resident students. The regional drawing power of institutions is seen in the number of first-time freshmen enrolling in institutions, particularly public community colleges, near their homes. Of the senior public institutions, the University of Louisville and Northern Kentucky University have the highest home and contiguous county proportions. The University of Kentucky and Morehead State University draw most of their first-time freshmen from other than home or contiguous counties. (MSE)

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This publication provides a detailed description about the origin of students in Kentucky state-supported and independent institutions of higher education. It contains information about county and state of origin for all students, first-time freshmen, and first professional students.

The following table provides a basic description of the origins data. More comprehensive and detailed data are contained within this report.

All of Kentucky's 120 counties are represented in higher education. Robertson County (67 students) had the fewest enrollees in higher education. Jefferson County (31,857) had the most enrolled students. Jefferson and Fayette Counties provide a major proportion of higher education enrollments. In fall 1988, these two counties accounted for 31 percent of resident students while accounting for 34 percent of the state's population.

The regional drawing power of colleges and universities is evidenced by the number of first-time freshmen who enroll at institutions near their home county. Public community colleges are most likely to attract students from home and contiguous counties (92 percent). Of the senior public institutions, the University of Louisville (76 percent) and Northern Kentucky University (59 percent) have the highest home and contiguous county proportions. The University of Kentucky (24 percent), and Morehead State University (23 percent) drew most of their first-time freshmen from other than home or contiguous counties. The average home and contiguous county proportion for the state-supported sector was 55 percent.

DEFINITIONS

The following definitions are those officially established for the reporting of enrollment data to the Council on Higher Education. Data in the report are based on net headcount enrollment as of the last day to add a course for credit. This date is the one established by each institution as the official cut-off date.

County, State, Or Territory Of Origin
County, state, or territory of student's legal residence at time of first admission

First-Professional Student
Student enrolled in dentistry, law, medicine, or "Pharm-D" programs

First-Time Freshman
Student who has not previously attended any college or university, or a student who was enrolled as a high school student with early college admission

Kentucky High School Graduate
Student graduating from a Kentucky high school

In-State Enrollment (Resident Student)
Student who is a legal resident of Kentucky as established by the Kentucky Council on Higher Education policy on classification of students for fee assessment purposes

Out-Of-State Enrollment (Nonresident Student)
Student who is not a legal resident of Kentucky as established by the Kentucky Council on Higher Education policy on classification of students for fee assessment purposes (foreign students are out-of-state)
